

Jonathan Clark is an active horn player from New York to Maryland. He is principal horn of the Allentown Symphony Orchestra and the Bay Atlantic Symphony and a member of Symphony in C and Princeton Symphony. Along with these orchestras he plays with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Philly Pops, Pennsylvania Ballet Company and the Reading Symphony. Jonathan studied at The New England Conservatory of Music and earned his Bachelors of Music in Horn Performance in 2008. While there he studied with Richard Mackey and Jason Snider and worked with many other member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He received a Masters in Horn Performance from Temple University's Esther Boyer College of Music and Dance in 2012, studying with Jeffery Lang of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Outside of the concert hall, Jonathan has recorded with NFL Films and played horn at the Walnut Theater and for the popular musicals Les Misérable and Miss Saigon on Broadway. When not performing Jonathan enjoys living in rural Bucks County with his wife and son.
